...a SPAC acquisition with Spartan Acquisition, that values the combined company at over $3 billion. The CEO of Allego joins us now Mathieu Bonnet, out of Menorca in Spain. Mathieu, thanks very much for your time today. Let me first ask, why go public via SPAC and what do you want to do with the funds?

Mathieu Bonnet, CEO of Allego

Happy to be there, Matt, first. Well, we have a great plan of investing in new charging stations, and when we studied the different options of funding and sustainable funding, we consider that the SPAC was the most efficient way to do that. And we wanted to have as well a very strong partner, knowledgeable in our industry, in EVs, that is a complex one, and with sustainability. So, we are delighted to be with the Spartan, the SPAC franchise of Apollo, and we are very keen to work with them.

Matt Miller, Bloomberg

So what kind of EV charging stations are you going to be deploying? I know you have a history in renewables, you founded an energy management platform, you also worked for one of the biggest hydro- energy companies in Europe. How is, how are your charging stations going to work?

Mathieu Bonnet, CEO of Allego

Okay, so what is important is to offer the best service to our customers, so we consider that most interesting segment is the fast and ultra-fast segment charging stations. We begin, eight years ago, and at that time we didn't have the technology and the cars to withstand such big charge, it was slow charging, and but because of that we rolled out and we have a great experience in running our charging station. We own and we have more than 26,000 charging ports, but now we are focusing on rolling out fast and loose-dry-fast charging stations. You can charge, and you can fuel all your battery in 10-15 minutes, so that's a great advantage for the future for the EV drivers.

Matt Miller, Bloomberg

So how long until these are on all of European highways? I mean the numbers sound high Mathieu, but I recently drove for example, from Berlin to Frankfurt in an electric vehicle that was very luxurious, but to be honest, really slow, because not only do you have to keep the speed down if you want to preserve the battery on the Autobahn, it's taking me, you know, 45 minutes to an hour to charge it up.

Mathieu Bonnet, CEO of Allego

Well, that's our plan. So, we want to be quick. And when we are ready to roll out 500 new big charging stations in the big countries in Europe, and mainly, Germany, France, UK, our strong market, and we expect just in five years to have more than, 16,000 fast and ultra-fast charging ports. So, it's going to be massive. The demand is here and the supply will be there, but it takes some times, of course, because we are, it's a new industry, and we need to have great connection, all these ancillary services but definitely, it will come.

Matt Miller, Bloomberg

I know Mathieu, that it's not just the charging that can be problematic. Oftentimes, it's making the charging stations work: they have to recognize your car, you've got to figure out a way to pay, it's just not as easy as going to Shell or BP and tapping your phone on the tap. Is there a faster a better way to do that with Allego as well?

Mathieu Bonnet, CEO of Allego

Yeah, well that's a very good point, Matt, because, indeed, it's, it's complex because we need to deal with different chargers, we need, we need to charge any cars, at our charging stations. You can charge any car from any brands, and you may, you make the, the EV drivers pay, and for that we have our app. But we see that we need to work with, with credit card as well and we need to offer a bunch of different payment, because when the customers, they have different ways to pay and we need to follow them with that. So, the technology is key and that's the reason why we are developing our own proprietary software technology to manage all our charter and our payments, so it will work.

Matt Miller, Bloomberg

Mathieu, thank you so much for joining us. Mathieu Bonnet, the CEO of Allego recently gone public with SPAC, with the Apollo affiliated SPAC Spartan III.
